Exploring Global Health Care Cost Drivers: Canada and Chile

Health care cost growth is a global issue. Regardless of the structure of their systems—public, private, or some combination—countries all over the world have to evaluate and address varying degrees of health care cost growth. Exploring comparative experience with health care cost trends and the drivers of cost increases worldwide is the objective of a 2015 webinar series jointly sponsored by the American Academy of Actuaries' Health Practice International Committee and the International Actuarial Association Health Section (IAAHS).

Join us for the fourth and final webinar in this series, which will provide a unique opportunity to learn about the successes and challenges that both Canada and Chile have experienced as they have worked to identify and address particular cost drivers. This webinar will be a 90-minute examination and analysis of both countries' health care systems, with a focus on health care cost trends. Panelists will explore some of the following topics for both countries:

- the health care financing system;
- efforts to address health care costs;
- unique programs or aspects of the system that could be relevant to other countries;
- examples of successes and challenges in each of the health care systems;
- metrics used to measure health outcomes; and
- anticipated changes and the impact of future health care cost trends.
